BARRIERS | terrace Screens

Terrace Screens consist of an aluminium frame and rigid panels made from a variety of materials including metal, wood and glass. They come in a variety of styles and heights and can be fully portable, allowing for an alfresco area which is well sheltered and robust, but can be dismantled at the end of the day.

While terrace screens always come with an aluminium frame, the panels they house can be made out of a variety of different materials. The most popular is glass but wooden panels can also be used to give a unique look or powder-coated metal sheet which can be branded effectively.

A wide range of visual styles are available, with curved or angled glass panels.

Terrace screens offer a wonderful opportunity to promote your establishment and make your alfresco area more noticeable. Not only can the frames be powder-coated almost any colour, but the panels can be easily branded with adhesive vinyl or, in the case of glass, etching.

Wooden panels offer even more unique branding opportunities as logos can be whittled or burned into the wood.

Terrace Screens can be fully portable, allowing the system to be removed and stored at the end of the day, should this be desired.

Wide, flat feet keep the screens stable while minimising any trip hazards. These feet can also be secured to the ground should more stability be required.

If the panels do not need to be removed, then Terrace Screens can be installed in ground sockets for a more permanent solution.
